The African Ivory Route

This route is for the person drawn to the African wildernesses. It is a world of breathtaking scenery and endless vistas of African bush where to this day large herds of elephants roam.

Wild and untamed, it is part of the more than 3,6 million hectares of national parks, nature reserves and game farms stretching across Limpopo Province. The route extends for some 2 000 km in a giant arc through remote scenic wilderness areas along the eastern, northern and western boundaries of the province.

Extremely rugged in places, the route skirts or traverses five major mountain ranges: the Strydpoortberge in the south, the Waterberg in the northwest, the Zoutpansberg in the central area and the Drakensberg and Lebombo in the east.

The Ivory Route has its origins in the legendary exploits of early ivory hunters and gold traders and is today an important ecotourism and 4X4 adventure destination popular with safari enthusiasts. Roads are rudimentary, but not all require off-road vehicles.

WILDLIFE

Wildlife enthusiasts will delight in the opportunities which the route presents for self-drive game viewing of the Big Five, guided wilderness hiking trails, horse trails and excellent birding.

Manyeleti Nature Reserve offers some of the best lion and leopard encounters, while Letaba Ranch is known for its vast numbers of elephant and buffalo. Hippo and crocodile sightings are frequent in the Great Letaba River and the remote Makuya Park is an excellent choice for those in search of elephant, buffalo, hippo and lion.

ADVENTURE OPPORTUNITIES

The Ivory Route provides great opportunities for nature-based adventure tourism. The rugged terrain is much appreciated by 4X4 enthusiasts, while the guided wilderness trails on offer in Manyeleti, Letaba Ranch and Makuya Park add a different perspective to game viewing. River rafting can be enjoyed in season in the Olifants River. The Mutale and Levubu gorges also offer good opportunities for abseiling.

CULTURE

The cultural heritage of the fascinating area reflects the diverse cultures of the present day inhabitants of the area, intrepid adventurers from a colourful past and ancient civilisations of which only archaeological evidence remains.

Cultural highlights along the route include numerous examples of San rock art, the realm of the Rain Queen Modjadji and archaeological sites such as Thulamela in the Kruger National Park, Mapungubwe in the north of the province and Makapan's Caves north of Mokopane (Potgietersrus).

The Limpopo Valley Route

The route affords the tourists the opportunity to experience the myths and legends of Limpopo. The route is strategically located along the Great North (N1) road towards Zimbabwe and is concentrated in the area along the Limpopo River in the Zoutpansberg region, named after the Zoutpansberg mountains found in the region..

The traveller can start the tour by exploring the attractions of the western section of the region such as the Blouberg nature reserve before heading into big game country where the focus shifts to the hunting history of South Africa. Small provisioning centres such as Vivo and Alldays are reminders of the continuing hunting tradition. Limpopo province is the premier hunting destination in South Africa.

In the 18th century the area around the confluence of the Shashe and Limpopo rivers was an important big game hunting ground. The trail retraces the old route along the Limpopo River blazed centuries ago by people trading with Arab and Portuguese merchants on the east coast.

They left behind the ruins of Mapungubwe, the burial place of ancient African royalty, and Great Zimbabwe. A visit to the Mapungubwe heritage site is worth a while for any tourist in the area.

The route proceeds into the heartland of the "land of legends and myths" – Musina, Mutale, and Thohoyandou,. Some of the interesting sites for visitors include the sacred forest of Thatwe Vonde, Lake Fundudzi, Dzata ruins, and "Big Tree (200-year old Baobab), and a visit to Makuya Park in the Levubu Gorge – one of the province's last remaining wilderness area. Whilst in the area, the visitor can enter the Kruger National Park either on its northern most gate at Pafuri or Punda Maria, to visit the Thulamela heritage site, and local art and craft markets.
